STUDY PROGRAMME

The content of the course will comprise the following areas of study:

> Audiovisual language and technology [12 ECTS]

The main goal of this module is to gain a solid foundation in audiovisual language. In addition, the basic technical use and aesthetic rules of the camera will be worked out. Finally, resources and software for the current edition will also be developed. With the aim of working on all this in a practical way, and with the aim of working on the basic organization, planning and coordination of audiovisuals, the main project of the module will be to make a short film.

> Visual and digital culture [12 ECTS]

Based on the change that digitalisation has brought to the field of communication, the aim of the module is to first get to know the main features of a hyperconnected society and then to work on communication aimed at that society. To this end, a wide range of knowledge will be addressed: the characteristics and development of the digital world, digital identity, the importance of the image in social networks, hypertext and interactive communication, web design and mobile communication, among others.

> Contemporary culture [3 ECTS]

Explores how the relationships between individuals and societies function and how they interact within the contexts of interculturalism, globalisation, migration, mass media, multilingualism.

Basque culture: language, media and education [6 ECTS]

A brief survey of Basque culture centred on some of its most relevant aspects: language, history and education system, in order to understand present day Basque society.

> Spanish [6 ECTS]

Intensive course whose aim is to consolidate and improve the Spanish language proficiency.

30 ECTS international course in English in the Basque Country, for Media, Journalism and Communication students [Erasmus or exchange students].
